Introduction

FORB Prisoners: 24 Countries in the Dock Blasphemy Prisoners: 9 Countries in the Dock

Last year, Human Rights Without Frontiers (HRWF) published its first Freedom of Religion or Belief (FORB) Prisoners List for the year 2012. The present list comprises hundreds of prisoners that were behind bars in 2013 on the ground of laws forbidding or restricting their basic rights to freedom of religion or belief: (1) freedom to change religion or belief, (2) freedom to share one's religion or beliefs, (3) freedom of association, (4) freedom of worship and assembly, or (5) conscientious objection to military service.

This Prisoners List has been expanded over the previous year to document FORB prisoners in 24 countries: Armenia, Azerbaijan, China, Eritrea, India, Indonesia, Iran, Kazakhstan, Kyrgyzstan, Laos, Libya, Morocco, Nagorno-Karabakh, North Korea, Pakistan, Russia, Saudi Arabia, Singapore, South Korea, Sudan, Tajikistan, Turkmenistan, Uzbekistan and Vietnam.

This year, a specific section has been created for prisoners whose freedom of expression related to religious issues was violated on the basis of laws against blasphemy, defamation of religion or the Prophet and similar issues: Egypt, Indonesia, Iran, Pakistan, Saudi Arabia, Syria, Tanzania, Tunisia and Turkey.

Prisoners charged for defending other human rights issues, the rule of law of democracy who happened to also be clerics or to be motivated by their religious beliefs are not included in the FORB Prisoners List. Their actions are undoubtedly laudable; however, HRWF considers such prisoners to belong to the broader category of human rights defenders.

In addition, it is unclear in certain cases whether criminal charges – which involve religious persons, although the charges themselves are unrelated to religion or belief – would be substantiated by due process of law. Where sufficient information is lacking in such cases, they do not appear in this report.

It is also important to note that not all the countries listed here are equal offenders of FORB in terms of number of prisoners, gravity of the sentences and issues of repression. For instance, while North Korea denies almost all genuine form of religious freedom, other states arrest, detain or jail people on specific grounds, such as:

- change of religion or belief and missionary activities
- freedom of association, worship and assembly
- conscientious objection to military service.

Countries of particular concern

Among the countries for which access to information was possible, China, Eritrea, Iran, North Korea and South Korea are undoubtedly the ones that by far have the highest number of FORB prisoners.

In China, a politically Communist state, five religions are recognized by the state: Buddhism, Taoism, Islam, Protestantism and Catholicism. Government and Communist Party control over religious affairs is exercised through the State Administration for Religious Affairs (SARA) and lower level

Religious Affairs Bureaus (RABs) under the State Council, the Party's United Front Work Department (UFWD) and the five "patriotic" religious associations: The Buddhist Association of China (BAC), the Catholic Patriotic Association of China (CPA), the Islamic Association of China (IAC), the Three-Self Patriotic Movement of Protestant Churches in China (TSPM), and the Chinese Taoist Association (CTA).

All religious groups must register with the appropriate religious organisation to be allowed to carry out their activities legally and may not deviate from the doctrines approved by the state. FORB prisoners in China belong to groups that are not recognized by the state (Protestant house churches), are banned as evil cults (Falun Gong), profess allegiance to a spiritual leader living outside China (Roman Catholics faithful to the Pope and Tibetan Buddhists faithful to the Dalai Lama) or are suspected of separatism (Uyghur Muslims and Tibetan Buddhists).

According to the US Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF) 2013 Annual Report, authorities detained close to 1,500 Protestants over the reporting period. Falun Gong practitioners and Tibetan Buddhists are also particularly targeted by the repression.

The HRWF report documents several mass arrests and a wide range of individual cases of believers of all faiths serving prison terms.

The HRWF Watch List does not claim to be exhaustive but shows the magnitude of the repression affecting religious believers in China.

In Eritrea, a military regime, there are only four officially registered religious groups: the Eritrean Orthodox Church, Sunni Islam, the Roman Catholic Church, and the Evangelical Lutheran Church of Eritrea. They are all under the control of the government. Members of unregistered religious groups continued to be put behind bars for exercising their freedom assembly, proselytizing and manifesting their religion in the public space. According to the USCIRF published at the beginning of 2013, an estimated 2,000 to 3,000 religious prisoners were languishing in prison. However, according to the 2013 report of the US Department of State, there were fewer such detentions than last year.

Moreover, the government requires all young people who are physically and mentally capable to perform a term of national service, including military training. The law does not provide for conscientious objector status, nor are there alternative activities for persons willing to perform national service but unwilling to engage in military activities. A new government civilian militia program requires most males and some females between the ages of 18 and 70 not currently performing military portions of national service or not serving in the military to attend militia training and to carry government-provided weapons. The penalties for non-participation in militia training include detention and hard labour.

At last report, 52 Jehovah's Witnesses, both men and women, are imprisoned in harsh conditions. Though none have been formally charged or tried, they are detained for conscientious objection, for religious activity or for undisclosed reasons. Three men, Paulos Eyassu, Isaac Mogos, and Negede Teklemariam, have been in prison for conscientious objection to military service since 1994. Misghina Gebretinsae and Yohannes Haile, two Jehovah's Witnesses over the age of 60, died while imprisoned.

In Iran, a theocratic state, Evangelical and Pentecostal churches are attracting an increasing number of Muslims and converts develop missionary activities among their former co-religionists despite the harsh repression and the threat of imprisonment.

Baha'is are de facto considered apostates from Islam. The right to believe in the Baha'i faith and to profess it individually or in community is denied to them. The official accusations leveled against the more than 100 Baha'is in prison are serious indeed: membership in a deviant sect with the goal of taking action against the security of the country; espionage; propaganda activities against the Islamic order; cooperation with Israel; membership in illegal groups and organisations; forming illegal administrative groups known as moral education classes with intent to attract Muslims and to promote the ideologies of the perverse Baha'i sect. These frightening accusations usually mask quite a normal activity such as carrying out community activities or teaching the Baha'i faith.

A number of Sunni and Shia Muslims are also in prison because of their voicing of dissenting opinions. Leaders of the Zoroastrian religious community are also behind bars.

Capital punishment or sentences to multiple lashes are also not uncommon in Iran.

In South Korea, a democratic country, 599 young Jehovah's Witnesses were each serving 18-month prison terms for conscientious objection to military service by the end of the year. From the Korean War period to the present, South Korea has relentlessly prosecuted young Witness men who refuse military service and has not provided an alternative to resolve the issue. During this period, South Korea has sentenced 17,549 Witnesses to a combined total of 34,100 years in prison for refusing to perform military service. South Korea has failed to abide by its international treaty obligations and has refused to recognize the fundamental rights of conscientious objectors.

Concerning North Korea, a totalitarian Communist country, access to information about FORB and other prisoners is impossible. The USCIRF estimated that 150,000 to 200,000 prisoners were in North Korea's network of political prison camps, including estimates of 6,000 Christians incarcerated in Prison No. 15 in the northern part of the country. However, no verifiable statistics are available concerning FORB prisoners.

Conscientious Objectors in Armenia and Azerbaijan

In Armenia, a former Communist country, about 30 conscientious objectors to military service were still serving prison terms in the first semester of 2013. However, in May 2013, the Armenian Parliament adopted a law providing for a civilian service which was totally independent from the Ministry of Defense.

By mid-November, all remaining conscientious objectors to military service were released in the framework of two general amnesties.

Over the last 20 years, 450 Jehovah's Witnesses had been sentenced to prison terms of 24-36 months for refusing to perform military service.

In Azerbaijan, the only two conscientious objectors sentenced to a prison term were released in the framework of a general amnesty. However, despite a constitutional provision for an alternative to "regular military service" and a pledge to harmonize its policy with Council of Europe standards upon the country's accession in 2001, there is still no law in Azerbaijan providing for such an option.

HRWF calls upon all concerned countries to release their FORB prisoners

The countries identified by HRWF in this Prisoners List are not the only ones that violate FORB. An increasing number of states now prefer to impose huge fines for changing religion or exercising freedom of association, worship and assembly. This is meant to have a deterrent effect on religious leaders and believers as well as divert the attention of human rights organisations.

HRWF publishes this annual report with the goal of catalyzing advocacy for the release FORB prisoners, including a number of forgotten prisoners who were sentenced years ago and who still remain in prison.

Therefore, HRWF calls upon the countries listed in this report

- to release all FORB prisoners and others sentenced on the grounds of freedom of expression in relation to religious issues and who have not used or advocated violence;
- to bring their national laws concerning freedom of religion or belief in harmony with UN standards.

ARMENIA

SINGAPORE

The government of Singapore enforces compulsory military service and does not recognize the right to conscientious objection. Eighteen young Jehovah's Witnesses are each serving a total of 39 months of imprisonment in the Armed Forces Detention Barracks but their names are not known. Another Jehovah's Witness was released in August 2013 after serving a year in prison for refusing reserve military duty.

SOUTH KOREA

Jehovah's Witnesses

At present, 599 young Jehovah's Witnesses are serving 18-month prison terms for conscientious objection to military service. From the Korean War period to the present, South Korea has repeatedly prosecuted young Jehovah's Witness men for their refusal to do military service. No provision is made for alternative service. Throughout this time, South Korea has sentenced 17,549 Jehovah's Witnesses to a combined total of 34,100 years in prison for their conscientious objection to military service. South Korea has failed to abide by its international treaty obligations to recognize the fundamental rights of conscientious objectors.

Number of detainees/ prisoners: 599 (on 18th November 2013)

The UN Human Rights Committee's decision on 1st December 2006 ruled that South Korea violated Article 18, paragraph 1, of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights. This decision found an infringement of freedom of conscience in the case of two Jehovah's Witnesses imprisoned for their conscientious objection to military service. On 24th March 2011, the Committee issued a similar ruling in the case of 100 other Jehovah's Witnesses; 438 other Jehovah's Witness complaints are still pending before this Committee. The Committee decisions remind South Korea that it is in violation of this provision under international law. The government of South Korea has stated that it does not intend to implement the Committee's views.

CONCLUSIONS

On 24 June 2013, the Council of the European Union adopted the Guidelines on the Promotion and Protection of Freedom of Religion or Belief, committing the EU to:

- recall at all appropriate occasions that laws that criminalize blasphemy restrict expression concerning religious or other beliefs; that they are often applied so as to persecute, mistreat or intimidate persons belonging to religious or other minorities, and that they can have a serious inhibiting effect on freedom of expression and on freedom of religion or belief; and recommend the decriminalization of such offences.
- Forcefully advocate against the use of the death penalty, physical punishment, or deprivation of liberty as penalties for blasphemy.
