

SOUTH KOREA

Jehovah's Witnesses

As of April 2016, 537 young Jehovah's Witnesses<sup>1</sup> were serving eighteen-month prison terms for conscientious objection to military service and as of 31st December 2015, there were 395 of them. A number of them were released at the end of their term while others were called up and refused to carry out their military service.

From the Korean War period to the present, South Korea has relentlessly prosecuted young Witness men who refuse military service, and the government has not provided any alternative to resolve the issue. The result? South Korea has sentenced over 18,700 Witnesses to a combined total of more than 35,800 years in prison for refusing to perform military service in the last sixty years.

Improved Prison Conditions

Though in the past imprisoned Witnesses endured harsh conditions and long prison sentences, conditions have improved and the sentences have been reduced to eighteen months. Prison authorities allow most Witnesses to hold religious meetings in prison. Additionally, more than seventy percent of Witness inmates are separated from the general prison population and placed in cells with fellow Witnesses.

The International View of the Right to Conscientious Objection

The UN Human Rights Committee (CCPR), which reviews the implementation of the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights (ICCPR), has consistently ruled that South Korea is violating the rights of conscientious objectors by convicting and imprisoning them. Most recently, on 14th January 2015, the CCPR released its fifth decision against South Korea on this issue. The decision, involving fifty Witnesses who had been imprisoned, repeated its earlier rulings that South Korea violated their right to "freedom of thought, conscience and religion." It also concluded that the government was guilty of "arbitrary detention" by punishing the men with imprisonment for exercising a right guaranteed by the ICCPR.

After reviewing South Korea's human rights record, the CCPR released concluding observations on 3rd November 2015. The CCPR urged the government to release all conscientious objectors, expunge their criminal record and provide adequate compensation, and adopt legislation providing for alternative civilian service. It stated that the government "should also fully implement the Views the [CCPR] has issued so far."

South Korea's Constitutional Court Again Considers the Issue

There is increasing domestic pressure on the government to adopt legislation providing for an acceptable alternative service program for conscientious objectors. Some district courts have referred cases to the Constitutional Court, and on 9th July 2015, that Court held a hearing to examine whether the government's refusal to recognize the right of conscientious objection is constitutional. The Court has twice ruled, in 2004 and 2011, that the Military Service Act's lack of recognition of the right to conscientious objection does not violate the constitution. A decision is expected soon.

Charges: Conscientious objection to military service

Statement of the defendants: Performing military service is incompatible with their faith.

Last court decision: Generally sentenced to eighteen months in prison

Article of the criminal/civil/administrative code or law: Military Service Act Article 88 Paragraph 1 ("If a person who has received a draft notice for active duty or Notice of Summons...without justifiable cause, does not report for service within the period specified in the following clauses or refuses the summons, then he shall be sentenced to a prison term of three years or less").

Duration of detention: Usually eighteen months

Other information: Conscientious objectors who are called up as reservists face multiple prosecutions and repeated punishments over an eight-year period for violation of Homeland Reserve Forces Act, Article 15, Par. 9
