

Table of Contents

- FECRIS Russian branch behind the persecution of non-Orthodox minorities in Russia
- Hate crime in Rennes-le-Château: a Muslim woman vandalizes a Catholic church
- Attempted arson against an Armenian Evangelical Church and other acts of anti-Christian vandalism in France
- Official statistics about the protection and surveillance of places of worship
- Anti-Christian incidents on the rise but sharp fall for anti-Muslim and anti-Jewish incidents
- Sharp decrease of anti-Semitic and anti-Muslim incidents but increase of anti-Catholic incidents

FECRIS Russian branch behind the persecution of non-Orthodox minorities in Russia

For years, the French anti-sect umbrella organization has been funded – almost entirely – by the French government which, under the principle of laïcité, is supposed to be neutral in religious matters

- The concept of 'spiritual security'
- Extremism without violence
- The Russian Orthodox Church hailed the ban of Jehovah's Witnesses
- FECRIS member association in Russia: St. Irenaeus of Lyons Religious Studies Research Centre
- FECRIS involvement in the hate campaign against religious minorities in Russia
- French laïcité betrayed
- Conclusions

HRWF (12.06.2017) - "The persecution of non-Orthodox minorities of foreign origin, or without a 'historical' presence in Russia, is based on the philosophy of 'spiritual security' which is promoted by the Kremlin, the Russian Orthodox Church and the Russian branch of the France-based European Federation of Research and Information Centers on Sectarianism (FECRIS)," declared French attorney Patricia Duval at a conference on religious freedom in Russia co-organized by MEP Hannu Takkula (Finland, ALDE) and Human Rights Without Frontiers on 6 June at the European Parliament in Brussels.

The concept of 'spiritual security'

In the 2000 National Security Concept, the Putin Administration stated:

"Assurance of the Russian Federation's national security also includes protecting the cultural and spiritual-moral legacy and the historical traditions and standards of public life, and preserving the cultural heritage of all Russia's peoples. There must be a state policy to maintain the population's spiritual and moral welfare, prohibit the use of airtime to promote violence or base instincts, and counter the adverse impact of foreign religious organizations and missionaries.”

This spiritual understanding of national security began with the adoption of the Russian federal law on security in March 1992. The law was a clear rejection of the old Soviet model of security. The first article of the law puts an emphasis on the importance of ‘spiritual values’, which in 1992 indicated the end of the Soviet militant atheism and the State persecution of religious believers.

However, the developments that ensued stifled the principles of liberalism established in the post-Soviet period and in the 1997 Law on Freedom of Conscience and Religious Associations, and ultimately put to bed the brief period of religious freedom that Russia experienced following the 1990 law on Freedom of Worship. The 1997 law, as well as the ideological position and policy which were later adopted by the Russian authorities, were all inspired by the desire to ensure the ‘spiritual security’ of Russia through the purported role of the Russian Orthodox Church in safeguarding national values and security.

Once the 1990 law guaranteed freedom of conscience, large numbers of missionaries flooded into Russia, believing that the former Soviet Union was to be a vast missionary territory.¹

In 1996, the Metropolitan Kirill of Smolensk and Kaliningrad commented on the problem of proselytism facing the Russian Orthodox Church (ROC). It was thought that proselytizing groups did not aid the ROC, but operated against it “like boxers in a ring with their pumped-up muscles, delivering blows.”² This ‘attack’ was framed to be against the nation’s national and religious values. In turn, the population developed and adopted the idea that ‘non-Orthodox’ can be defined as those who attempt to dismantle and destroy the spiritual unity of the people and the Orthodox faith, that the ‘non-Orthodox’ are “Spiritual colonizers who by fair means or foul try to tear the people away from their church”³

The leaders of the ROC believed that Russia’s cultural identity as an Orthodox nation was crumbling. As Wallace Daniel and Christopher Marsh state, “Unless the government affirmed Russia’s traditional faiths against the aggressive actions of other religious groups and sects, the patriarch [Alexey II] maintained, the renewal of Russia’s own spiritual traditions stood little chance.”⁴

Therefore, in this atmosphere, where the ROC believed itself as well as Russian culture to be under attack, Boris Yeltsin passed the 1997 Law, differentiating traditional and nontraditional religions in Russia.⁵

Since then, the concept of ‘spiritual security’ as part of national security has been instrumentalized by the political authorities and the judiciary to restrict the rights of non-Orthodox minorities of foreign origin and to criminalize their beliefs, their teachings, their religious publications and peaceful activities. They erect such

¹ Witte, Bourdeaux, Proselytism and Orthodoxy in Russia. Wipf and Stock Publishers. 1999. Page 73. http://www.jstor.org/stable/1465916?seq=1#page_scan_tab_contents

² Payne, “Spiritual Security, the Russian Orthodox Church and the Russian Foreign Ministry: Collaboration or Cooptation?”. <http://bit.ly/2r9nmG1>

³ Ibid.

⁴ Ibid.

⁵ Ibid.

allegations on the basis of the 2002 law against extremism which in 2006 was purged of its violence element.

Extremism without violence

The year 2006 was a turning point when the law countering violent extremism was amended, removing the necessity for violators to be associated with extremism, violence or calls to violence, Duval commented.

The amended law was criticized by the UN Human Rights Committee (28 April 2015), the PACE Monitoring Committee of the Council of Europe (14 September 2012), and the Venice Commission (1 June 2012) which called on Russia to correct the law so it requires an element of violence or hatred.

The amendment to the law opened the door to arbitrary and unrestrained interpretations of the concept of extremism, to the criminalization of freedom of thought, expression, worship, and assembly, to police raids, fabricated charges, arrests and sentences of members of peaceful groups such as Jehovah's Witnesses, Scientologists, Tablighi Jamaat, and Said Nursi followers. Their movements and their publications were all victims of bans. Jehovah's Witnesses had their assets confiscated and were fully banned nation-wide by the Russian Supreme Court on 20 April.

The Russian Orthodox Church hailed the ban on Jehovah's Witnesses

The Russian Orthodox Church called Jehovah's Witnesses a dangerous, totalitarian and harmful sect and supported its ban in the Russian Federation.

"Their doctrine contains a multitude of false teachings. They distort the teaching of Christ and interpret the New Testament incorrectly. They do not believe in Jesus Christ as God and Savior, they do not acknowledge the doctrine of the Holy Trinity, and therefore they cannot in any way be called Christian," the head of the synod's Department for External Church Relations, Metropolitan of Volokolamsk Ilarion, declared on the program "Church and World" on the Rossiia-24 television channel.

High-level members of FECRIS and its Russian branch played a prominent role in the campaign against non-Orthodox minorities of foreign origin and the adoption of the repressive policy aiming at their eradication.

Aleksander Dvorkin, Vice-President of FECRIS, is also Russia's most prominent « anti-sect » activist. He was appointed in 2009 by Russia's Justice Minister to head the Ministry's Expert Council for Conducting State Religious-Studies Expert Analysis whose mandate is to investigate the activity, doctrines, leadership decisions, literature and worship of any registered religious organisation and recommend action to the Ministry.

A. Dvorkin is also Director of the St. Irenaeus of Lyons Religious Studies Research Centre, FECRIS' member association in Russia.

FECRIS member association in Russia: St. Irenaeus of Lyons Religious Studies Research Centre

The Saint Irenaeus of Lyons Centre for Religious Studies, which is FECRIS member association in Russia, was founded in 1993 with the blessing of the Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia Alexy II. The Centre is also a missionary faculty department of St Tikhon's Orthodox University in Moscow the objective of which is "to spread credible information on doctrines and activities of totalitarian sects and destructive cults". For that purpose "employees of the Centre pursue research, advisory, lecturing and publishing activity and liaise with state structures and the media." Since then, A.L. Dvorkin has been the president of this Centre affiliated to the Russian Orthodox Church.

The Saint Irenaeus of Lyons Centre for Religious Studies is the head centre of the Russian Association of Centres for Religious and Sectarian Studies (RATsIRS). The president of RATsIRS is also A.L. Dvorkin; the vice-presidents are Archpriest Alexander Novopashin and Archpriest Alexander Shabanov; the executive secretary is priest Lev Semenov, Ph.D., associate professor.

Apart from the Saint Irenaeus of Lyons Centre, there is a global network of so-called "parents' initiatives" and other similar organizations in Russia and the CIS the majority of which have become members of RATsIRS in Russia (some are missionary departments of Orthodox dioceses) and created RATsIRS representative offices abroad.

FECRIS' member association in Russia and its affiliates are all financed by the Russian Orthodox Church and engaged in the fight against Evangelicals, Pentecostals, Mormons, Baha'is, Jehovah's Witnesses, Falun Gong practitioners, Scientologists...

"Rehabilitating" followers of "non-traditional religions"

A number of the centres of the Russian Association of Centres headed by A. Dvorkin are "rehabilitation centres" for followers of "non-traditional religions".

Under the pressure of families, followers are induced to go to these rehabilitation centres to be "enlightened" about the danger of sects, about how sects manipulate their minds, and to accept the Orthodox religion because, according to them, if one really believes in Christ he is protected from various sects.

Here follow a few of these centres:

- Centre of rehabilitation of victims of non-traditional religions under the missionary department of Stavropolskaya and Vladikavkasskaya Eparchy. Location: Russian, Novopavlovsk.

The Centre indicates on its website: "The basis of the department is to help people in the acquisition of real, true Faith in God and the Church".

- Center of rehabilitation of victims of non-traditional religions under the Church of Our Lady "Joy of All Who Sorrow". Location: Moscow.

Rehabilitation" is done by two priests and one graduate of Saint Tikhon's Orthodox University (where Alexander Dvorkin is teaching).

- Rehabilitation Centre for sect victims under the Holy Trinity Monastery. Location: Russia, Kursk.

Priests and psychologists work there to "rehabilitate" followers.

- Rehabilitation Centre for victims of non-traditional religions in the name of St. Joseph of St. Volotsk.

This Centre operates under the Orthodox Eparchy of Yekaterinburg city.

- As concerns the Saint Irenaeus of Lyons Centre for Religious Studies, FECRIS member association in Russia, in an article on their website they explain how to go with people "caught in sects": The process of exit through an external influence involves a psychologist, relatives and a "sect-specialist", to arouse critical thinking towards the "sect" and get rid of emotional dependency towards it. Then it involves connecting the person to the Orthodox catechist, preferably a priest offering the true religious and ideological alternatives.

This seems like a remake of the "deprogramming" technics used in the 1980s and outlawed in the US, which were used to remedy alleged "brainwashing" by religious communities. "Arising critical thinking" towards the sect is achieved through bombarding the followers with misinformation and twisted facts against the denomination they adhered to. After this phase, a phase of "reprogramming" is then done in the Russian "rehabilitation centres" by Orthodox priests so that the followers of non-traditional religions whose creeds have been destabilized through the "critical thinking arising" are now persuaded to adhere to the "true" religion instead.

French laïcité betrayed

FECRIS was created in France and is financed by the French State, whose Constitution and laws provide a total separation of State and religions and the respect of all creeds. The FECRIS vice-President is currently Alexander Dvorkin, the leading Russian anti-cult crusader and key agitator responsible for popularising the term 'totalitarian sects', a term used by defenders of "spiritual security" to designate peaceful religious denominations considered as potential threats to the Orthodox Church.

FECRIS' Russian member association headed by Alexander Dvorkin is an organ of the Orthodox Church and has been blessed by Patriarch of Moscow and All Russia Alexy II. Key member organizations of FECRIS' Russian member association are led by radical Orthodox priests and archpriests or are missionary departments of Orthodox dioceses. They refer followers of non-traditional religions to "rehabilitation centres" where they are re-educated to the "right" Orthodox religion.

The question is "How can FECRIS be financed by the French State and support such activities in Russia?"

Conclusion

The European Convention on Human Rights guarantees the right to freedom of religion or belief, which entails the duty for signatory States to hold neutrality in religious matters. Both the Russian Federation and France have committed to the Convention and are bound by its obligations.

In spite of these obligations, Russia's motivation behind the banning of a number of non-violent movements is narrowly linked to the spiritual security philosophy which encompasses the rejection of religious diversity for the benefit of religious homogeneity, the defence of the Orthodox Church against proselytizing new religious movements, and the protection of Russian values against the contamination by unwelcome foreign values.

Moscow's fight against foreign religious groups and against the foreign funding of Russian human rights NGOs administratively renamed 'foreign agents' are a source of deep concern in the international human rights community because all the legal – but undemocratic – tools have been put in place to clean up the religious landscape.

A community of 177,000 members of the Jehovah's Witnesses movement in Russia has been banned, its members are being jailed, their children taken away, and their security is no longer guaranteed. Some have started to emigrate to the European Union. Members of the Church of Scientology are also prosecuted and jailed, the police raid their Churches with machine guns, and initiate liquidation proceedings. Peaceful Muslim groups of foreign origin, such as Tablighi Jamaat and Said Nursi followers, have been banned and a number of their followers have been arrested and sentenced to several years in prison.

Is the European Union willing to receive all the religious refugees from Russia?

Is the Council of Europe really able to have its member states fulfill their obligations under the Convention?

Hate crime in Rennes-le-Château: a Muslim woman vandalizes a Catholic church

HRWF (15.05.2017) – On 13 May, the Muslim woman who had vandalized and desecrated the altar of the Ste Marie Madeleine Church in Rennes-le-Château was declared accountable for her acts after being examined by psychiatrists and will be tried on 8 September. In the meantime she is under court supervision and may not go to the place where she committed her misdeed.

After her arrest, she was placed in police custody and then referred to the Office of the Public Prosecutor in Carcassonne.

On 23 April, at 9am, a young woman wearing a black coat went to the tourism office to ask when the church would be open. Two hours later, she was seen near the church wearing a white cape, a veil on her head and a Venetian mask on her face. She went to the so-called Virgin's cave nearby and had a long talk on the phone in Arabic. Afterwards, she went back to the church with an axe, started hitting the stoup and decapitated the famous red devil of the Bible Asmodea attached to it, cut off his arm, put a Kur'an on it and lacerated the bas-relief of the altar. Tourists immediately called the mayor and the gendarmerie arrested her.

When asked why she had committed such a misdeed, she answered calmly: "Today is election day here but in Syria the West is bombing and killing children. You are all kafirs! My husband is over there."

The young woman was born in Quillan and was living in Lavelan, in Ariège.

(*) The French word is « mécréant ». Kafir is a derogatory term used for “unbelievers”.

For more information, see <http://www.christianophobie.fr/breves/aude-musulmane-profanatrice-de-leglise-de-rennes-chateau-correctionnelle#.WRjGfoVOLce>

Attempted arson against an Armenian Evangelical Church and other acts of anti-Christian vandalism in France

HRWF (11.04.2017) - On 2 April, there was an attempt of criminal arson against Armenian Evangelical Church in Alfortville (Val-de-Marne). A garbage can was filled with petrol in front of the building and set on fire.

Pastor Gilbert Léonian expressed his anger in the media because the local authorities had not taken any measure when on 26 February acts of vandalism had been perpetrated against the building. The pastor does not exclude that the attacks were motivated by his inviting pastor Norek Hovsétian of the Armenian Evangelical Church in Bagdad for a cycle of conferences in France about the situation of Christians in the Middle East.

A number of other acts of vandalism have also recently been reported by the French Observatoire de la Christianophobie:

The church of Saints-Pierre-et-Paul in Buchy (Seine Maritime) on 4 April

The church of Saint-Saturnin de Vineuil (diocese of Blois, Loir-et-Cher) on 8 and 30 March

The calvary of Redon in Ille-et-Vilaine (End of March)

Over 30 tombstones in the cemetery of Batignoles (Paris) on 1 April

In La Réunion, the Marian Shrine of the Black Virgin in Rivière des Pluies was vandalized in the 2-3 April night. The statue of the Virgin was partly destroyed and it is not sure that it will be possible to repair it before the 1 May pilgrimage. In the following days, several Catholic oratories were also vandalized on the island.

Official statistics about the protection and surveillance of places of worship

Anti-Christian incidents on the rise but sharp fall for anti-Muslim and anti-Jewish incidents in 2016

By Willy Fautré, Human Rights Without Frontiers

HRWF (20.02.2017) - According to the annual report of the French Ministry of the Interior published on 1st February, the number of racist, anti-Muslim and anti-Jewish incidents largely decreased last year while the number of anti-Christian incidents dramatically increased over the same period.

After a record number of reported incidents in 2015 (2,034 incidents), racist, anti-Semitic and anti-Muslim incidents decreased in 2016 with 1,125 reported incidents (-44.7%). These statistics are reflective of incidents (acts of violence, arsons, degradations...) and threats (insults, hate speech...) about which complaints were filed.

Protection of religious community buildings

In 2016, incidents targeting Jewish and Muslim community buildings respectively decreased by 54% and 37.5% in comparison with 2015 while there was an increase of 17.6% concerning Christian (Catholic) places of worship.

A closer look at the statistics indicates that:

- 90 % of all the incidents in 2016 were targeting Christian places
- From 2008 to 2016, incidents concerning Christian places of worship increased by 245 %

According to the statistics of the Interior Ministry, 4,320 places of worship and religious community buildings were under surveillance of mobile (non-static) patrols of law enforcement forces and soldiers:

- 2,400 were Christian and 45,000 churches (5%)
- 1,100 were Muslim and 2,500 mosques (44%)
- 820 were Jewish and 500 synagogues (100%)

Anti-Catholic incidents in January 2017

According to the website of the Observatoire de la Christianophobie, twenty-two anti-Catholic incidents were recorded in France in January 2017.

Incidents targeting churches, chapels and other Catholic places of worship: vandalism (5), theft (6), arson (4), profanation (2), tags (1), vandalism in cemeteries (2), and against schools (1)

Physical or verbal aggression against priests: 1 case

Some recent incidents in the first two weeks of February 2017:

- Caen: Anarchist tags on a calvary
- Ste Anne d'Auvray : Vandalism dans la chapel of Mary Immaculate
- Reguisheim : Deliberate damage in the church and the cemetery
- Avon : Theft and profanation in the convent

For more cases and details, see <http://www.christianophobie.fr>

Anti-Christian incidents on the rise but sharp fall for anti-Muslim and anti-Jewish incidents

By Willy Fautré, Human Rights Without Frontiers

HRWF (03.02.2017) - According to the annual report of the French Ministry of the Interior published on 1st February, the number of racist, anti-Muslim and anti-Jewish incidents largely decreased last year while the number of anti-Christian incidents dramatically increased over the same period.

After a record number in 2015 (2034 incidents), racist, anti-Semitic and anti-Muslim incidents clearly decreased in 2016 with 1125 incidents (-44.7%). These statistics are reflective of incidents (acts of violence, arsons, degradations...) and threats (insults, hate speech...) about which complaints were filed.

Anti-Muslim incidents

At the same time, the Collectif contre l'Islamophobie en France (CCIF) and the Observatoire National contre l'Islamophobie (ONCI) have published their own report, which confirms the trend measured by the Ministry of the Interior, but also notes that this has not impacted the level of tolerance towards Muslims.

According to the CCIF, anti-Muslim incidents diminished by 35.9% in 2016 in comparison with 2015 and by 24.1% against 2014. Under the heading "discrimination" (419 cases), the CCIF also includes acts of vandalism (25), assaults (39) and hate speech (98). Most recorded discrimination incidents are committed in public services (64%). These internal statistics are related to the number of cases directly referred to the CCIF.

The ONCI recorded 186 cases of anti-Muslim incidents in 2016 against 429 in 2015, a decrease of 57.6%: 64 "acts" (against 124) and 118 "threats" (against 305). These statistics are related to incidents leading to the filing of a complaint.

The general decrease in anti-Muslim incidents is said to be due to several factors: bigger social empathy and solidarity towards Muslims, policies against Islamophobia as well as securing mosques and prayer places by law enforcement forces (initiatives supported by 341,000 EUR in 2016 and 756,000 EUR in 2015). The strategy of ISIS terrorist attacks aiming at dividing France's civil society and fueling anti-Muslim sentiments has obviously failed.

Anti-Jewish incidents

According to French interior ministry figures, there were 57.6 percent fewer anti-Semitic incidents in 2016 compared with the previous year.

The French government sees this drop as "the fruit of government initiatives", in particular a €100 million campaign to "fight racism, anti-Semitism and all forms of discrimination linked or originating from religion".

According to the January 22 report compiled by the Israeli ministry for diaspora affairs, the number of anti-Semitic attacks in France dropped, by 63.6 percent, between 2015 and 2016. Much of the credit for this drop is due to the French government, which in 2015 launched an anti-racism initiative involving hundreds of posted police officers and soldiers patrolling near Jewish schools and synagogues, said the Israeli ministry.

Anti-Christian incidents

According to the Ministry of the Interior, 949 anti-Christian incidents - 399 acts of vandalism and 191 cases of theft of worship items - were recorded on the French territory in 2016 but this does not include the hacking of Catholic websites which were said to number 112 by the French Observatory of Christianophobia. Some comparative statistics:

- Anti-Christian incidents: 17,4% increase between 2015 and 2016.

- Incidents targeting Christian sites (places of worship and tombstones: 245% increase between 2008 and 2016).
- Incidents concerning Christian places of worship in 2016: 90% of incidents concerning all places of worship (Christian, Jewish and Muslim).

The Ministry of the Interior notes that there was a satanist motivation behind 14 incidents and in 25 cases there was an anarchist connotation.

In France, there are about 45,000 church buildings, 2500 mosques and 500 synagogues. According to the Ministry of the Interior, 2400 Christian places of worship, 1090 Muslim buildings and 817 Jewish sites (synagogues, schools and community centers) are protected by law enforcement forces. In the last two years, an interministerial fund for the prevention of delinquency has granted 12.5 million EUR to provide the most sensitive religious sites with security and video-protection material.

Recommended reading:

En 2016, les actes racistes, antisémites et antimusulmans ont baissé en France, mais pas les actes antichrétiens

Number of racist incidents in France plummets

Les actes antimusulmans en forte baisse en 2016

Sortie du rapport 2017 du CCIF : une évolution du fait islamophobe

Baisse des actes racistes, antisémites et anti-musulmans en 2016

ANNEX

Evolution de l'islamophobie selon le décompte...

... du Comité contre l'islamophobie en France

... du Conseil français du culte musulman

SOURCE : RAPPORT CCIF 2017 ; COMMUNIQUÉ DE PRESSE DU CFCM

Sharp decrease of anti-Semitic and anti-Muslim incidents but increase of anti-Catholic incidents

HRWF (09.01.2017) - During the first eleven months of 2016, anti-Semitic incidents have sharply decreased by 65% and anti-Muslim incidents by 60%, according to statistics provided by the Ministry of the Interior to the French newspaper "Le Figaro" (See the full article dated 28 December 2016 at <http://bit.ly/2ip0IF9>). However the newspaper keeps silent about the number of incidents concerning Christians, Jehovah's Witnesses and other faiths in France; but do such state statistics even exist for other religious communities?

In 2015, 808 anti-Semitic incidents and threats were recorded, this number fell to 294 incidents in 2016 according provisional statistics. In 2015, 429 complaints were filed on the grounds of anti-Muslim incidents and threats. From January to November 2016, 173 of such complaints were filed.

According to the Observatoire de la Christianophobie, 375 anti-Catholic incidents were recorded in 2016 and 273 in 2015, an increase of 37,4 % (<http://bit.ly/2johW9B>). Recent incidents mainly targeted nativity scenes.

On 6 January 2017, the nativity scene of the St Charles Cathedral in Saint-Etienne (Eure) was partly destroyed by an arson attack. The mayor, Gaël Perdriau (Republican political party), condemned this act as a desecration of a place of worship, a criminal offence.

At the end of December, the baby Jesus was stolen from the manger of the SainteMadeleine church in Hyères (Var) and from the display of the Planquay church in SaintOuen (Seine-Saint-Denis). On the night of 17th December, all the figurines in a display in Fouchères (Aube) were thrown into the river Seine by an unknown person.

On 24 December, the angel of the St Anne church in Lanveoc (Finistère) was stolen. The mayor, Louis Ramnoé, found this act scandalous. The statue had been in the church for 80 years.
