Date and place of arrest: On 27th September 2016

Charges: Administrative offense (minor hooliganism), and later charged with criminal involvement in an extremist Islamic group

Statement of the defendant: He denies the charges

Article of the criminal/civil/administrative code: Criminal Code Article 174, Part 1 (Conspiracy to seize power), Article 175, Part 2 (Calls to violent change of the constitutional order), Article 177, Part 1 (Inciting social, ethnic or religious hatred), and Article 275, Part 1 (Creating an organised criminal group).

First court decision: He was sentenced to fifteen days imprisonment. Two new fifteen-day sentences were then handed down.

Last court decision: On 13th December 2016, he was sentenced to a fifteen-year strict regime prison term by the Ashgabad City Court.

Place of detention: Unknown

Other information: Atdaev was denied a lawyer of his choice, only being provided with a state lawyer. His trial was closed. Since January 2017, Atdaev has 'disappeared' (his location is unknown). He was arrested after returning to Turkmenistan to renew his passport from Egypt, where he was studying Islam at Al-Azhar University. As Atdaev had an old-style Turkmen passport whose validity was annulled when new passports were introduced, he was required to return to Turkmenistan which he had not visited since 2008. While in Egypt he married a Russian convert to Islam, Daria, and they have two young children.
