Film in Brussels about the institutionalized persecution of the Baha'is

HRWF (01.11.2022) - On 26 October, Brussels Office of the Baha'i International Community (BIC) held the screening of a documentary by Farid Haerinejad, "Others in their own land", with the participation of the film producer himself. The event was hosted by a Member of the European Parliament, Leopoldo Lopez Gill (Political Group of Christian Democrats, Spain). Rachel Bayani introduced the event and both speakers on the name of the Brussels Office.

Farid Haerinejad retraced the history of the Iranian Revolution and the harsh persecution of the Baha'is since 1979 through the testimonies of numerous victims and survivors of the Ayatollahs' regime.

About 200 Baha'is were sentenced to death and executed in the first decade after the revolution for refusing to recant their faith, including women. Nowadays, the persecution is more insidious but not less brutal: no access to higher education and to jobs in public institutions, discrimination and stigmatization at school, dismissals from all sorts of professional activities, closure of shops held by Baha'is, confiscation or destruction of property, economic pressure, police crackdowns on private meetings, arbitrary arrests and fabricated charges, very high bails for a temporary release from pretrial detention, hundreds of people waiting for months and even years before going to prison, physical and psychological torture, etc.

The purpose of this anti-Baha'i policy is the suffocation of this faith community whose population is estimated at about 300,000 in Iran.

Iran punishes Christians with harsh prison sentences

Evangelical focus (19.10.2022) - When authorities in Iran summoned a Christian couple in Tehran on August 13, the house-church members supposed it concerned the return of their confiscated belongings.

Instead, Homayoun Zhavesh and his wife Sara Ahmadi were detained in Tehran's Evin Prison, notorious for its harsh treatment of people deemed political enemies of the state, rights organizations say.

"Friends are concerned about their well-being, especially as Homayoun suffers from advanced Parkinson's disease", Christian Solidarity International (CSI) said in an October 6 statement, citing information from Middle East Concern.

Iranian Christians join protests over woman's beating death: Reports

Washingtontimes.com - Five weeks of street protests in Iran have attracted and emboldened the Islamic republic's Christian minority, human rights advocates said Thursday.

More than 300 Iranian Christians took the unusual step of releasing a public letter protesting the regime as a "bloodthirsty infection" on the nation, Lela Gilbert, senior fellow for international religious freedom at the Family Research Council, told a webinar sponsored by the group Save the Persecuted Christians.

Ms. Gilbert said Christian believers are stepping forward to join protests over the treatment of Mahsa Amini, a 22-year-old Kurdish-Iranian woman, who died last month in the custody of Iran's "morality police" after being detained for reportedly wearing the mandatory headscarf incorrectly in public.

Ms. Gilbert said the protest letter "is the first time the Christian community, not just women, men and women, has made a statement against the regime."

She estimates that "at least a million Christians" in Iran have converted from Islam, although others believe the number is far greater.

Iran: Christian convert released from prison

Middle East Concern (18.10.2022) - Iranian Christians are rejoicing that Naser Navard Goltapeh was released from Evin Prison on 17 October after being pardoned by the Supreme Leader, Ali Khamanei.

The Iranian pastor was arrested along with three Azerbaijani Christians in June 2016. In June 2017, they were each sentenced to 10 years' imprisonment for "acting against national security through forming and establishing illegal house churches." The Azerbaijanis had left Iran during the process, forfeiting bail.

Naser was taken to Evin prison in January 2018 after his conviction and sentence were upheld by the appeal court.

Naser repeatedly requested leave and early release which was consistently denied. His release now as part of the pardon of several people, came as a surprise.

There has been concern for the Christians detained in Evin during the recent fire and reported shots and explosions (state media reports eight prisoners were killed). It has been a relief that most Christians have been able to contact family and assure them that they are okay

Dozens have been arrested, imprisoned and attacked. As recently as July, several preschool teachers were detained in a series of raids by intelligence officers. They were accused of being spies.

Iran punishes Christians with harsh prison sentences

Many Christians arrested and charged for belonging to "illegal" groups.

Evangelical Focus (19.10.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3su16YB> - When authorities in Iran summoned a Christian couple in Tehran on August 13, the house-church members supposed it concerned the return of their confiscated belongings. Instead, Homayoun Zhaveh and his wife Sara Ahmadi were detained in Tehran's Evin Prison, notorious for its harsh treatment of people deemed political enemies of the state, rights organizations say.

"Friends are concerned about their well-being, especially as Homayoun suffers from advanced Parkinson's disease", Christian Solidarity International (CSI) said in an October 6 statement, citing information from Middle East Concern.

CSI and other advocacy and aid organizations recently issued calls for prayer for Zhaveh, 63, and Ahmadi, 44.

Middle East Concern (MEC) reported they were first arrested in June 2019 on suspicion of belonging to an "illegal organization", with Zhaveh spending a month in Evin Prison and Ahmadi held there for 67 days – half the time in solitary confinement.

In November 2020, Ahmadi was sentenced to 11 years in prison for her alleged role in leading a house church, according to MEC, adding that Zhaveh was sentenced to two years for house church membership.

The sentences included a two-year ban on membership in any social or political group, a two-year ban on foreign travel and six months of community service.

The convictions were upheld on appeal in December 2020, but Ahmadi's prison sentence was reduced to eight years, MEC reported.

The couple expected to start their prison sentences on June 15, 2021, but upon arrival at Evin Prison in the midst of the COVID-19 pandemic, they were told they could return home for an indeterminate time.

"On August 13, Homayoun and Sara answered a summons to the prison, expecting to have confiscated property returned," MEC stated. "Instead, they were both detained.

Prayer is requested that their harsh sentences will be reviewed, especially since Homayoun is in poor health, and that they will be acquitted; and that the Iranian authorities will stop the persecution of their citizens for the peaceful expression of their faith."

Rash of imprisonments

Also serving time in Evin Prison for his faith is house-church leader Joseph Shahbazian, sentenced to 10 years by Branch 26 of the Tehran Revolutionary Court on June 7 for "founding and leading an organization that aims to disrupt national security", according to the U.S. Commission on International Religious Freedom (USCIRF).

Initially arrested on June 30, 2020, following raids on house churches in several cities, Pastor Shahbazian was released on bail on August 22 of that year.

An appeals court in Tehran rejected his appeal in August of this year, and on August 30 he began serving his sentence at Evin Prison, USCIRF reported.

As an Iranian-Armenian he was permitted to worship as part of Iran's historic Armenian Christian community, but he was targeted as a pastor of a church that included Iran converts from Islam, according to Barnabas Fund.

In the Shiite stronghold of Mashad in northeastern Iran, a grandfather with cancer is being held in Vakilabad Prison for converting to Christianity, according to advocacy group Article 18.

Gholamreza Keyvanmanesh, in his late 50s, and three other Christians arrested in Neyshabur face charges of "acting against national security through propaganda against the regime" and "insulting the sacred" (blasphemy), Article 18 reported.

"The other three – two women and another man, in their 40s and 50s, whose names cannot be reported – are being held in Neyshabur Prison," the organization stated.

Members of the Islamic Revolutionary Guard Corps warned at least eight other Christians present at the meetings of the four arrested Christians that they will soon be summoned for further questioning, according to Article 18.

"They were also forced to sign commitments to refrain from gathering with other Christians", Article 18 reported. "Bibles and mobile phones were among the items confiscated from the church members."

Christianity is among the official minority faiths in Iran, but converts to Christianity are not recognized and are vilified as "enemy groups of a 'Zionist' cult," the group stated.

Converts are banned from attending the churches of Armenian and Assyrian Christians, who are permitted to teach only in their own ethnic tongues and not to seek new members, Article 18 stated.

Hence converts meet at private homes but are frequently raided and charged with belonging to "illegal" groups with "anti-security" purposes, "even though in reality the meetings are no different from church gatherings anywhere else in the world", Article 18 stated.

"In recent years, dozens of Iranian Christians have been handed prison sentences of up to 15 years on such trumped-up charges."

Iran was ranked 9th on Open Doors' 2022 World Watch List of the countries where it is most difficult to be a Christian.

Iran Press Watch (16.09.2022) - When Negar Sabet awakes after a restless night in Sydney, she agonises about her elderly mother, Mahvash Sabet, who has been locked up in Iran's notorious Evin prison since the end of July.

This time, Negar is conscious of the stories her mother has told about prison, but she doesn't want to imagine how her mother is being treated.

Stop ruthless attacks on persecuted Baha'i religious minority

Amnesty (24.08.22) - The Iranian authorities' persecution of the Baha'i religious minority has increased in intensity with a recent flurry of raids, arbitrary arrests, home demolitions and land grabs, Amnesty International said today.

Since 31 July 2022, Ministry of Intelligence agents have raided and confiscated dozens of Baha'i properties and arrested at least 30 members of the Baha'i community on account of their faith in various cities throughout Iran. The authorities have subjected many more to interrogations and/or forced them to wear electronic ankle bracelets. The Ministry of Intelligence announced on 1 August that those arrested were “core members of Baha’i espionage party” who “propagated Baha’i teachings” and “sought to infiltrate various levels of the educational sector across the country, especially kindergartens”.

Baha’is expose ‘Propaganda ploy’ to incriminate community with fake videos and hate speech

Iran Press Watch (22.08.2022) - The Baha’i International Community (BIC) today reported news of an effort to incriminate the Baha’is in Iran through a staged video production, filmed in a kindergarten, designed to produce propaganda footage that would show Baha’is teaching their religion in educational establishments.

On 31 July, according to the latest BIC statement, and the same day that intelligence agents were invading Baha’i homes and arresting pre-school teachers, agents also entered a kindergarten in a major city in Iran and distributed Baha’i books and pamphlets to its teachers, none of whom were Baha’is. The agents reportedly instructed and forced the kindergarten staff to say, on camera, that Baha’is had brought these materials and distributed them to the teachers.

Mr. Zahraa’i was not home, and the agents did not have a female officer with them.

Hanaan Haashemi pressured for a “confession”

Sens Daily (11.08.2022) - Hanaan Haashemi, who was arrested in Shiraz on July 19 and is held by the Ministry of Intelligence, has informed her family in a telephone call that she is under pressure from interrogators to make a forced confession. It is not known what she is supposed to confess to, or why she was arrested, apart from her Baha’i beliefs. Interrogators have told her that her release from prison will only happen if she makes a confession as they instruct.

On July 19, 2022, security forces arrested her with four other Bahai's: Nilufar Hosseini, Bahiyyeh Manavipour, Mithaaq Manavipour and Elhan Haashemi. Nilufar Hosseini and Elhan Haashemi have been released on bail.

Treatment of Baha'i in Iran: FCDO minister's statement

Gov.UK (05.08.2022) - The UK is deeply concerned by increasing arrests of the Baha'i in Iran, including recent reports that the Iranian government has demolished houses and confiscated land in Roushankouh, Iran. Former spiritual leaders of the Baha'i in Iran are also reported to have been detained.

FCDO Minister responsible for Human Rights and Freedom of Religion and Belief, Lord (Tariq) Ahmad of Wimbledon, said:

The persecution of religious minorities cannot be tolerated in 2022. We strongly condemn the increasing detention of members of the Baha'i community in Iran, as well as reports of forced closures of their businesses and land seizures. The persecution of religious minorities is a serious violation of international human rights law.

We are working closely with our international partners to hold Iran to account and continue to raise human rights concerns regularly with the Iranian government.

UN should condemn renewed crackdown on persecuted Baha'i faith in Iran

Center for human rights in Iran (05.08.2022) - Increasing arbitrary arrests of members of the persecuted Baha'i faith in Iran, and an intensifying government-sponsored campaign of destruction and confiscation of their properties should be internationally condemned, said the Center for Human Rights in Iran (CHRI).

Ahmed Shaheed, the UN Special Rapporteur on freedom of religion or belief, should demand accountability for the state's ruthless and systematic persecution of the minority religion.

Spain: a letter to the Iranian ambassador about the case of four sentenced Christians

Aricle 18 (01.08.2022) - The Spanish Evangelical Alliance (AEE) has sent a letter to the Iranian embassy in Spain regarding the case of four Christians who have recently been sentenced to prison terms in the Persian country.

The document, signed by the organisation's secretary general, Emilio Carmona, sets out the cause of the four believers in question.

"These people were simply exercising their freedom of thought, conscience and religion, as well as their freedom of expression, as defined in the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights ratified by their country". Carmona adds: "I am deeply shocked by this news because I believe that freedom of religion or belief is very important".

Moreover, the document expresses clear concern not only for the situation of the sentenced believers, but also for that of Christians in Iran as a whole.

A couple of Iranian converts under threat of deportation from Belgium

Willy Fautré, director of Human Rights Without Frontiers

HRWF (23.08.2022) - Hamid Reza Hossein Khani (42) and Mariam Soltani (38), two converts from Shia Islam to Protestantism, have recently been denied asylum by the Belgian authorities and are under threat of being sent back to Iran where they are at risk of being arrested and sentenced to a prison term for apostasy.

They converted to Christianity about three years ago and are now attending a Protestant Church in Belgium (the United Protestant Church of Belgium recognized by the state). They run a website in Farsi language (<http://www.lightsindarkness.com>) through which they spread the message of the Bible to their fellow citizens in Iran and the diaspora. Their website enjoys such an audience that VOA News has mentioned it in one of its programs in Farsi.

These Iranian converts were born and living in Qom, a city in Iran well-known for its university training radical Iranian and foreign Shia imams. Some of them from Azerbaijan who were educated in Qom were put in prison for extremism when they went back to their country.

I personally interviewed the couple of converts for two hours on 19 May 2022.

Hamid Reza Hossein Khani

Hamid graduated from the Islamic Azad University of Qom as a teacher of English language and literature. He speaks Farsi, English and can manage it in Turkish.

Until he fled from Iran in 2020, he had been teaching English. In the year 1397 (2018), one of his students who happened to be a Christian shared his faith with him during several months and invited him to watch videos from YouTube about the Christian faith.

Hamid participated in house church meetings and in June 2019, he converted to Christianity. The religious meetings were taking place in different houses and convened about 6-7 converts in all.

In summer 2020, their meeting, which was taking place in Hamid's house, was interrupted by 'a visit' of intelligence services agents in civilian clothes. Hamid and Mariam managed to flee but other believers were arrested.

Some days later, Hamid and Mariam fled Iran in fear of being arrested and imprisoned.

Hamid has a 11year old daughter

They arrived in Belgium in September 2020.

Mariam Soltani

Mariam comes from a pious Shia family. Her grandfather was a mollah.

She had a beauty salon in Qom. Through a Romanian client who happened to be in Iran, she was put in contact with the leader of a house church in 2019. She met Hamid at one of the house church meetings in the same year. There were some links between their own families and they knew each other.

Mariam has three children: two daughters (13 and 8 years) and one son (18 years)

Mariam's relatives and neighbors know that she has fled abroad and about her conversion and it seems the police are actively hunting her.

Persecution of Christians in Iran

HRWF has a worldwide database of religious prisoners belonging to 19 religious groups in 18 countries. In Iran, HRWF has documented 14 cases of Protestants, mainly converts, who are behind bars <https://hrwf.eu/hrwf-prisoners-database-other-countires/>

More information about the persecution of Christians can be found on Article 18: <https://articleeighteen.com/latest/>

Opinion and conclusion

After interrogating the two asylum-seekers for two hours, including about their conversion, my conclusions are that

- Hamid and Mariam really converted to Christianity in Iran
- They could have been arrested there at any time
- Mariam Soltani could be killed by her uncle, an Islamic hardliner, if sent back to Iran
- Hamid and Mariam are true Protestant believers who continue to actively participate in religious life in Belgium
- They should be granted political asylum.

Germany denies refuge to Christian convert – after family member tortured, killed for his faith

An Iranian Christian convert in Germany faces likely death for his faith as deportation looms

Court deems it "unlikely" that a person would have really converted to Christianity after family member was killed for his beliefs

ADF International (11.08.2022)- <https://bit.ly/3dAYd48> – A 44-year-old Iranian cabinetmaker who converted to Christianity has been denied protection in Europe, facing likely imprisonment or death upon return to his home country. The European Court of Human Rights has dismissed his attempt to appeal the decision on the basis of his right to freedom of religion. The 44-year-old is now threatened with deportation to Iran.

"No one should be persecuted for their faith. Iran is one of the most dangerous countries in the world for Christians, and converts are particularly at risk. In the last year, religious persecution has greatly worsened. So-called "religious deviants" can be given prison sentences, national security charges are continuously used to target religious minorities. The courts in Germany must take this into account when processing asylum applications," said Lidia Rieder, Legal Officer at ADF International.

A dangerous journey to Christianity

Hassan – whose name has been changed to protect his identity and is recorded only as "H.H" in public documents – applied for asylum in 2018.

He testified before the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees that he had learned about Christianity in Iran through his wife's brother. His brother-in-law had been imprisoned for his activities with a house-church, and was ultimately killed for practicing his faith in jail.

"My wife's brother had become a different person by becoming a Christian. We wanted to see if we would get this feeling when we became Christians," H.H. told the authorities.

"I had had many problems in Iran...I had many questions, but I was not allowed to ask them. When I asked questions, I was beaten at school. This led me to want to know which God I was facing. One day my brother-in-law said to me and my wife that he had good news. There is a treasure, there is a living God, Jesus Christ, we are His children and not His slaves...He said there is a free salvation available," he continued, reflecting on his conversion experience.

Subsequently, Hassan's wife adopted the Christian faith and eventually the whole family converted. Once discovered, security forces then stormed their house and confiscated books, the computer, their passports and their Bible. The family fled to Turkey, and from there to Germany.

"In Germany I share the gospel, I organize prayer circles here in the accommodation. I want to be a good example, to win the others to faith in Jesus Christ. My greatest goal would be for my children to be able to find Christ in freedom, and to do good," said Hassan.

Credibility under Question

When H.H.'s asylum application was rejected by German authorities, he appealed to the Greifswald Administrative Court. The court dismissed H.H.'s case, declaring that it was "not particularly likely" that a Muslim would decide to become a Christian after his brother-in-law had been tortured and killed and his wife abused. It was more likely that the events described, if they had actually taken place, would have a deterrent effect on third parties," said the Administrative Court.

"There are national and international guidelines for asylum applications based on religious grounds. According to the United Nations High Commissioner for Refugees (UNHCR), decision-makers need to be objective and not arrive at conclusions based solely upon their own experiences. General assumptions about a certain religion or country should be avoided. Unfortunately, this guidance is being used very selectively by the German decision-makers. They do not understand that maintaining a religious belief when persecuted can be appealing to others and not just a deterrent as seen from the history of Christianity," Rieder continued.

This week, the European Court of Human Rights quickly declined to hear arguments in Hassan's defense, leaving him vulnerable to deportation to a country where religious conversion can carry a prison penalty.

Inconsistent allocation of asylum decisions nationwide

According to OpenDoors, Iranian asylum seekers in Germany are often confronted with suspicions of feigned conversion. The situation varies greatly across the country: a comparison of the federal states shows an inconsistent picture of very low to very high rejection rates with regard to the recognition or rejection of converts by the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF) and the administrative courts, which suggests subjective examination procedures.

"There appears to be a tragic disregard for the application of a uniform and objective standard of examination for these kinds of dire asylum cases, in violation of international law. When decision-makers and judges decide on asylum applications according to their own criteria and without regard for the on-the-ground situation in the countries of origin, it results in severe personal suffering. H.H.'s case is a very worrying example of this," said Lidia Rieder.

Situation of Christians in Iran worsens

Iran is ranked 9th on the World Watch List, a ranking of countries with the worst persecution of Christians worldwide. The extent of persecution is "extreme".

In 2021, Iran passed amendments providing for prison sentences for "insulting Islam" and "deviant activities". Last year, several Christians were arrested on this basis, charged and sentenced to five years in prison each. According to a report by the US Commission on International Religious Freedom, the persecution of converts to Christianity is particularly bad.

"Every person must be able to freely choose their faith. Iran systematically fails to protect its citizens' right to religious freedom. Iranian law must be amended to be brought into accordance with international human rights law, which protects the right of every individual to choose and freely practice their faith. Until this happens, countries like Germany have a responsibility to help to protect vulnerable religious minorities when they have an opportunity to do so. Ignoring that responsibility can have fatal consequences." said Kelsey Zorzi, Director of Global Religious Freedom at ADF International.

Iranian Christian converts struggle to get asylum in Germany

Human rights activists and pastors denounce that "the recognition rate of asylum applications has dropped from close to 100% to close to single digits".

Evangelical Focus (05.08.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3dvMhk7> - According to human rights activists, asylum applications by Iranians who have converted to Christianity have less and less chance of success in Germany.

"Human rights violations on religious grounds are an everyday reality in the country", said Martin Lessenthin, board spokesman of the International Society for Human Rights (IGFM), in a press conference about the situation of Christian converts from Iran in Germany.

At the IGFM's press conference, pastor Gottfried Martens called the Federal Office for Migration and Refugees (BAMF) "a political authority that is not concerned with the individual case of an asylum application".

According to Martens, "the recognition rate of asylum applications from Christian converts has dropped from close to 100% a few years ago to now a figure close to single digits".

He pointed out that politicians show a "certain indifference" and "shrug their shoulders" when Christians from Iran are deported because of their faith.

Administrative courts

Martens stressed that the asylum seekers "have no choice but to go to the administrative courts". The trials he has experienced with converts from Iran and Afghanistan of his church, "are often a pure game of chance. I wonder how that could be reconciled with the rule of law".

"In many cases these administrative judges presume to be experts in matters of faith in such a way that one is simply stunned. They would sometimes openly say that they knew better about the seriousness of a conversion than a pastor", he added.

For the pastor, "the hearings are less about the seriousness of the conversion and much more about the personal attitude of the judge".

Churches support

Lessenthin also called on "to the churches, especially the big churches in Germany, to stand up for the interests of their brothers and sisters in faith".

"This is where the church leadership would have to position itself more clearly" , concluded the IGFM spokesman.

Bahai Cemetery in Tehran fenced off by authorities

Hrana / Sens Daily (07.06.2022) - Authorities have installed a new wall and gate around the Bahai cemetery in Tehran that adjoins the Khavaran cemetery, where executed prisoners of conscience were buried following the 1979 Revolution. The gate is locked. This appears to relate to recent earthworks to create a new cemetery of Muslims on an adjoining site, and relocating the entrance to the Khavaran cemetery. Last year, the Bahais were informed that new burials would have to be made among the mass graves in the Khavaran cemetery.

A Tehran court sentences seven Christians, including a clergyman, to a total of 32 years in prison

Rev Joseph Shahbazian gets 10 years in prison, plus other penalties, including a ban on travelling abroad. Two converts get six years, while four other Christians can pay a fine to avoid jailtime. During the trial, the presiding judge, Iman Afshari, subjected the defendants to pressures, threats and humiliation.

AsiaNews (08.06.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3xiMCMZ> - An Iranian court has sentenced an Iranian-Armenian Christian clergyman to 10 years in prison. Along with him, two women converts from Islam were also given a six-year sentence for their role in house churches.

The court decision against Joseph Shahbazian and the two converts (pictured) came yesterday, this according to Article18, an advocacy group that documents religious oppression in Iran.

Four other Christians – Salar Eshraghi Moghadam, Farhad Khazaei, Somayeh (Sonya) Sadegh and her mother Masoumeh Ghasemi – were also given sentences ranging from one to four years but were also offered the option of paying fines ranging from US$ 800 to US$ 1,250 each in order to stay out of prison.

In total, the seven Christians were sentenced to 32 years in prison. However, the fate of Rev Joseph Shahbazian, 58, and the two converts – Mina Khajavi, 59 and Malihe Nazari, 48, is different. All three will have to go to prison following the sentence imposed on 29 May by Judge Iman Afshari, head of the 26th Branch of the Tehran Revolutionary Court.

The harshest sentence was imposed on Rev Shahbazian. In addition to his 10-year prison sentence, the Iranian-Armenian clergyman will serve two years of internal exile in a remote province in south-eastern Iran.

After his release, he faces a two-year ban on travelling abroad or membership in any political or social organisation, and must report to Iran's intelligence service for two years on an unspecified "seasonal basis".

In reading the verdict, Judge Afshari, who is building a reputation for convicting Christians, stressed that the clergyman "established a group to attract Muslims" and "under the cover of religious programmes for prayer has propagated Evangelical Christianity".

The judge accused the Christian pastor of engaging in "illegal activities and unfounded claims" and so "abused people's inner weaknesses and attracted some of them" to "his group".

Local sources report that, during a trial that lasted no more than four hours, Judge Afshari tried to put pressure on the two women defendants with the promise of a lighter sentence if they blamed Rev Joseph of cajoling them into converting.

Faced with their refusal, he threatened to increase their sentences. Using "harsh and sarcastic language", he tried to "humiliate them and denigrate their beliefs". When the defendants' lawyer objected, he replied that he was "only joking."

The crackdown against this group of Christians is but the latest in a long series. Last month, another court imposed a 10-year sentence on another Iranian-Armenian, Anooshavan Avedian, for "propaganda contrary to and offensive to the holy religion of Islam".

Experts and activists are increasingly worried about the escalating violations of religious freedom, which are also affecting Baha'is, Sufis, Sunnis and atheists.

Local sources report blatant violations of the right to defence, with insults against people and their religion during trials, as well as "confessions" extorted by force or deception during imprisonment.

In recent years, Iranian authorities have arrested thousands of Christians who worship in house churches with hundreds convicted on charges of "action against national security".

All this refutes claims by the Iranian government and its diplomats that Christians enjoy religious freedom and the right to worship in their churches and dedicate themselves to their own activities.

Second Iranian Christian woman began prison sentence on Easter Saturday

Article 18 (28.04.2022) - <https://bit.ly/381Da8p> - A second Iranian woman convert to Christianity began a two-year prison sentence on Easter Saturday on charges related to the practice of her faith.

Sakine (Mehri) Behjati handed herself in to the authorities at Evin Prison in Tehran on the same day as Fariba Dalir, and both are now serving two-year sentences on similar charges.

Mehri was later permitted a transfer to Lakan Prison in her home city of Rasht, so she could be closer to her young child.

Who is Mehri Behjati?

Mehri was one of four Christian converts first arrested in February 2020 for their membership of a house-church in Rasht.

The four Christians – also Mehri's nephew Hadi \(Moslem\) Rahimi and married couple Ramin Hassanpour and Kathrin (Saeede) Sajadpour – were officially charged in May 2020 and taken to Lakan Prison after being unable to afford the bail set for them – of 500 million tomans (around $30,000).

They were eventually released a week later on reduced bail of 200 million tomans ($11,500).

The Christians were sentenced in August 2020 to between two and five years in prison for “acting against national security” by belonging to a house-church and “spreading Zionist Christianity”. Ramin was given a five-year sentence, Moslem four years, and Mehri and Saeede two years.

Their appeals were rejected in September 2020.

On 9 January 2022, Moslem left behind his nine-month-old daughter to begin serving his four-year sentence at Evin Prison so that the property deed submitted by a friend to secure his bail may be released.

A month later, the other three Christians were told they must hand themselves in to the authorities in Tehran by the end of February. However, Mehri was later permitted an additional six weeks at home, in order to be able to spend the Iranian New Year, Nowruz, with her family.

Mehri and her nephew, Moslem, applied to the Supreme Court for a retrial, but their applications were rejected by Branch 9 of Iran’s highest court in February.

Christian woman convert begins two-year prison sentence

Article 18 (16.04.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3KKmfUZ> - A 51-year-old woman Christian convert today began serving a two-year prison sentence in Tehran’s Evin prison for “acting against national security by establishing and leading an Evangelical Christian church”.

Fariba Dalir, whose case has not been reported until now, was one of six converts arrested in Tehran in July last year, including her fiancé at the time and now husband, Soroush.

Five of the Christians were sentenced in December – Fariba to two years, and the other four, including Soroush, to 10 months for membership of the church.

However, due to time already spent in detention, these four were told they could instead choose to pay fines of 5 million tomans each (around $250) to escape further imprisonment.

The sixth Christian, a 17-year-old girl, was released without charge, but only after spending 10 days in solitary confinement, and being subjected to intense interrogations in a detention centre of the Revolutionary Guard Corps.

Fariba and Soroush themselves each spent over a month in solitary confinement at the detention centre following their arrests on 19 July 2021 – Fariba at a hair salon, and Soroush while driving his car.

Three of the other Christians, including the 17-year-old and another woman and her daughter, had been arrested at their homes the previous day.

The sixth Christian, a man, was arrested on the same day as Fariba and Soroush, but the names of these other Christians have not been divulged.

After spending around 50 days each in solitary confinement, Fariba was transferred to Qarchak women's prison and Soroush to the Greater Tehran Penitentiary, where they were detained for two months longer, before being released on bail – of 600 million tomans ($25,000) for Fariba, and 300 million tomans ($12,500) for Soroush.

The couple married in the months between their release and sentencing, which took place on 4 December 2021 at Branch 26 of Tehran's Revolutionary Court, but now they are apart again.

Fariba was in fact initially sentenced to five years in prison after the court wrongly stated that she had a previous criminal record. Her sentence was later revised once the court was informed of the error.

Iranian churches get behind #Place2Worship campaign

Article 18 (14.01.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3qFaloA> - Iranian-speaking churches in the diaspora have added their voice to the call for Persian-speaking Christians to be given a place to worship.

The #Place2Worship campaign was launched late last year in response to a question from three Christian prisoners of conscience, who asked where they might worship once they were released, having been imprisoned for gathering together in house-churches because converts to Christianity are not permitted to attend the churches of Iran's recognised Christian minority of ethnic Armenians and Assyrians.

This campaign has been supported by numerous former prisoners of conscience, and now has the support of 33 churches from 10 different countries – the UK, USA, Canada, Turkey, Netherlands, Germany, Sweden, Austria, Norway, and Georgia.

Their joint statement, and the list of signatories, can be read below:

Statement by Iranian churches in support of the #Place2Worship campaign

We, the leaders of Persian-speaking churches outside Iran, in unison with imprisoned Christians, have a simple question for the authorities of the Islamic Republic: "Where can a Persian-speaking Christian worship?" and not risk imprisonment.

We also join Article18 in noting that Persian-speaking Christians are not only deprived of a church but are also arrested by security agents when they gather in their homes to pray and read the Bible. So not only have these citizens been deprived of their freedom of thought, religion and community, but they and their families are not even safe at home.

The Iranian government has not stopped at closing churches; it has even turned the worship of Christian converts into a security issue, by confiscating their Bibles and sentences these citizens to long prison terms.

In the last four decades, Persian-speaking churches have been closed and many imprisoned Christian leaders have been forced to flee, and some have even been killed.

Deprivation of a church is the tip of the iceberg of structural discrimination and systematic repression against Persian-speaking Christians.

The government does not recognise the Persian-speaking Christian minority, depriving them of their basic human rights and rights as citizens. In the view of the Islamic Republic, the hundreds of thousands of Christian converts have no formal existence and are nothing more than ghosts.

So standing together with the #Place2Worship campaign, we call on the Iranian government to stop persecuting Persian-speaking Christians, to recognise the human rights and citizenship rights of this minority, and to allow them to have a church.

We note that according to the International Covenant on Civil and Political Rights, to which Iran is a signatory, "Everyone shall have the right to freedom of thought, conscience and religion. This right shall include freedom to have or to adopt a religion or belief of his choice, and freedom, either individually or in community with others and in public or private, to manifest his religion or belief in worship, observance, practice and teaching."

We also call on all Iranians to stand by Christian citizens in this campaign and not to leave them alone in their campaign for freedom of belief.

Nine Christian converts conditionally released following Supreme Court ruling

Article 18 (01.01.2022) - <https://bit.ly/3HYUvLz> - Nine Christian converts serving five-year prison sentences for their involvement in house-churches have been conditionally released from prison, pending a review of their case.

The nine men were informed on Wednesday 29 December that they would be released on or before the New Year.

The first of the men, Abdolreza Ali Haghnejad, was released from Anzali Prison the following day, 30 December, and the remaining eight were released from Tehran's Evin Prison earlier today.

Their conditional release follows a Supreme Court ruling in November, in which the judges questioned the legality of their conviction and affirmed that "merely preaching Christianity, and promoting the 'Evangelical Zionist sect', both of which apparently means propagating Christianity through family gatherings [house-churches], is not a manifestation of gathering and collusion to disrupt the security of the country, whether internally or externally".

This decision followed the launch of a campaign, #Place2Worship, which was inspired by two of the nine men, Behnam Akhlaghi and Babak Hossainzadeh, who during a short furlough in October had recorded videos and wrote an open letter to the Iranian authorities asking, "Where can we, as Persian-speaking Christians, worship once we have finished serving our prison sentences?"

All nine men – Abdolreza Ali Haghnejad, Shahrooz Eslamdoust, Behnam Akhlaghi, Babak Hosseinzadeh, Mehdi Khatibi, Khalil Dehghanpour, Hossein Kadivar, Kamal Naamanian and Mohammad Vafadar – are members of the non-Trinitarian "Church of Iran" from the northern city of Rasht.

They were arrested during raids on their homes and house-churches in January and February 2019, and each sentenced to five years in prison in October 2019 by Judge Mohammad Moghiseh, who has earned the nickname the "Judge of Death" for his harsh treatment of prisoners of conscience.

The Supreme Court verdict issued on 3 November had paved the way for their immediate release – until a Revolutionary Court had time to reconsider their case and issue a fresh judgment – however for unknown reasons their release was delayed until now.

Their temporary release is not related to a recent directive of the judiciary to give a 10-day furlough to Christian prisoners over the Christmas period, as prisoners convicted of "acting against national security", or sentenced to more than five years, were not included in the directive.
